Building an Intuitive Relationship with Your Pet with Wendy Groomes

Sunday, May 21, 2017 at 3:00 PM

Animals by nature have a strong intuitive sense. They most definitely read body language, but they also communicate in a language that shares the light-waves that pass through every living thing in the universe. Animals say the most basic things (thank you, hello, I'm hungry, that's not the best food for me) to us every day, and we can hear them when we are tuned in to listen, to pick up the wave being transmitted.

When we hear our pets, and acknowledge what we hear, they are overjoyed. Connecting in that way builds immense trust and deepens our existing bond. Additionally, when we add the use of flower essence therapy, homeopathy, herbal medicine, and whole food nutrition to our pets care, they benefit and are immensely grateful.

Wendy Groomes passionately shares her gifts with the world as an animal communicator, energy healer, wellness consultant, coach, and pet-sitter.

In 1994, she attended massage school, which primed the pump to begin professional practice in the healing arts (1995). Wendy worked solely with people (massage, energy work, intuitive healing) before assisting holistic veterinarians in their clinics and on a referral basis (1999). There she provided technician assistance, therapeutic massage, energy work, basic Tellington-Touch, flower essence therapy, nutritional and supplemental counseling, and grief-transition support for animals and their guardians. Since then, Wendy has helped hundreds of pets and their guardians emotionally, mentally, and physically address tragic loss, transition, health and wellness issues, and much more.
